THE UNIVERSE FOUND

PELOSIUM

The densest element yet known, Pelosium, has one neutron, 12 assistant deputy neutrons, 75 deputy neutrons, and 224 assistant deputy neutrons, giving it an atomic mass of 211. The particles are held together by dark forces called morons that are surrounded by vast quantities of light-like particles called peons. Pelosium's symbol is PU. Pelosium's mass increases over time as morons randomly interact with various elements in the atmosphere leading to the formation of isodopes. The trait of moron-promotion leads scientists to believe Pelosium is formed when morons reach a certain quantity in concentration. This unknown hydrothermal quantity is referred to as Critical Moron.
